

Russ DuBois

Russ DuBois is the architect on staff at Wake Forest University Baptist Medical Center in Winston-Salem. He is a member of the Medical Center's Visual and Performing Arts Committee, and a past board member of NC Arts for Health, a state-wide organization dedicated to promoting art in healthcare. As an architect, he has a strong interest in the quality of the built environment, and has contributed three guest columns to the Winston-Salem Journal op-ed page.

Russ graduated from the University of California at Berkeley in 1978, and has 30 years' experience as a healthcare architect. Prior to coming to the Medical Center in 1990, he worked for HDR, Inc., a large architectural firm in the Midwest.

Russ is married to Becky DuBois, the Pregnancy Support and Adoption worker at Catholic Social Services. They have two sons, ages 19 and 21, and live in Winston-Salem.
