2. Post your photo on the city's Facebook page (tinyurl.com/cwsfacebook). Alternatively, e-mail the photo to michellem@cityofws.org with "This Place Matters" in the subject line. Be sure to identify the location.
3. Optional: Include a few lines about why this place matters to you!
4. Come see your photo on the city's Facebook page, and see the places that matter to others.

One photo will be selected for publication in the Winston-Salem Journal at the end of May to mark the conclusion of Historic Preservation Month.

Note: Submitted photos become the property of the City of Winston-Salem and maybe used for publication purposes including printed material or web site use.

It's up to all of us to make sure our favorite historic landmarks get their just due. Start now by sharing a place that matters to you. Then help spread the word and get even more people involved. Tell your family and friends to submit their own photos.

Forsyth County - making the past part of the future!

This Place Matters

This Place Matters is a photo-sharing campaign inviting people to post photos of themselves in front of whatever places matter to them. It can be the family home, your church, your local hangout or a downtown restaurant. If it's special to you, we want to see it.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation started the campaign in 2008. The Forsyth County Historic Resources Commission adopted the campaign this year to celebrate Historic Preservation Month.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation helps people protect, enhance and enjoy the places that matter to them. The Forsyth County Historic Resources Commission's mission is to protect and enrich Forsyth County's cultural, historical, architectural, and archaeological heritage through the identification, designation, and preservation of historic resources.
